Presidential Elections

Face-to-Face Polls

STATE LEVEL DETAILS

Conducted nationwide on January 27, 2023
Results released on Sunday February 5, 2023

Nextier conducted a nationwide poll to decipher voter preferences in the forthcoming 2023 presidential elections.

- A team of 144 enumerators conducted the polls on Friday, January 27, 2023, in rural and urban communities in the 36 states and the Federal Capital Territory (FCT).
- The representative sample of 3,000 respondents was derived from quotas weighted to demographic population totals on age and gender in each state and the FCT. The quotas were weighted to achieve a representative sample of all registered voters and ensured to match the demographic population. The sample generated a margin of error of 2 percent at a 95 percent confidence level.
- Nextier used a proportionate, stratified random sampling design for polling. Respondents were registered voters. Stratification was set on key demographics, including age, gender, geo-political zones, states, and senatorial zones, to ensure the final sample is representative of the actual population. The gender and the geo-political zone demographic distribution of the respondents are in the same proportion as the 2006 National Population Census.
- The respondents were asked to select their preferred party using the party logo – only one question on “favourability” polled with the candidates’ names.
- Although Labour Party secured the highest voter preference, the elections may be decided in a second-round runoff.
- This document provides the state level data from polls.
